R. H. KNAPPEN

There is a movement afoot to organize a local unit of the state militia, and judging by the popularity of the service in other communities, Campbell leaders should have little trouble in signing up a well-manned unit. Date and place of meeting will be found elsewhere in this issue of the Press.

The need for such an organization does not make itself immediately apparent, but we must bear in mind the fact that things move lightning fast in modern war, and a home defense group which seemed unnecessary yesterday may be desperately needed tomorrow. Threat of invasion is very real; perhaps not full scale invasion, but the dropping of air-borne saboteurs, unless nipped in the bud, might well lead to serious damage to, or even complete destruction of, some of California's war industries. And air-borne troops, if successfully landed and consolidated, could assist more formidable forces in establishing a beachhead for full-scale invasion. That has been done elsewhere, and is a specialty of the little yellow brothers.

Anyone who contemplates enlisting but feels that the "long chance" won't compensate him for his trouble, or who feels he might look silly drilling for no immediate purpose, should put his doubts and pride away for the duration, and sign up. If the militia is never called upon, so much the better; if it is, let's have a well-trained unit that can give a good account of itself.

British lawmakers are a bit ired by Winston Churchill's conduct of the war. Britain's reverses in Lybia apparently have brought to a head long-smoldering dissatisfaction in some quarters, and the parliament craves to have the prime minister on the carpet.

It is true enough that the British have suffered severe losses in this war, and it appears that some of them, at least, were the result of stupidity or overconfidence or bad management somewhere along the line. But that Mr. Churchill is entirely to blame is a premise hardly tenable. It is nevertheless true that the prime minister has assumed too many portfolios, and the cry that no one man can do all the work he has taken upon himself is founded on firm foundation.

Reluctance to delegate authority to others seems to be a failure of great leaders in all ages, and it is a weakness which should not be countenanced by the people of the United Nations. We have seen right here in America serious consequences of this attitude on the part of the President. I do not intend to criticize Mr. Roosevelt—he honestly believes that he can carry the entire load and make all the important decisions, but wisdom of such magnitude is not the lot of any man. The responsibility must be shared; it does not do to give a smart, capable man charge of some phase of the war effort and at the same time hamstring him with reservations on the final and vital decisions. Mrs. Charlotte Strom Dies In San Jose Sunday

Mrs. Charlotte H. Strom of San Jose passed away Sunday and funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the Funeral Home of Curry & Gripenstraw. Interment was in Oak Hill Memorial park.

Mrs. Strom had many friends among the older residents of Campbell, as the family made their home here for many years, when Mr. Strom was engaged in contract building.

Their three children, all of whom are living, graduated from the Campbell schools.

Mrs. Strom was a native of Sweden, 65 years of age.

Members of the family are her husband, Oluf, Mrs. Harold L. Selvy of Carmel, Mrs. Keith Maynard, and David L. Strom, both of San Jose, and nieces, Mrs. Anna Hagelin Moorland, San Jose, and Mrs. Arthur Seagren of Oakland.

Last Rites for Mrs. Henrietta Walton

Mrs. Henrietta Willamette Walton, who had been ill for some time, passed away Sunday in Los Gatos, and private funeral rites were held yesterday morning in that city with interment in Oak Hill Memorial park.

Mrs. Walton was a native of Brownsville, Oregon, but with her husband William W. Walton, had made her home in Campbell for many years.

Besides her husband she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Leola J. Blackford of San Jose.

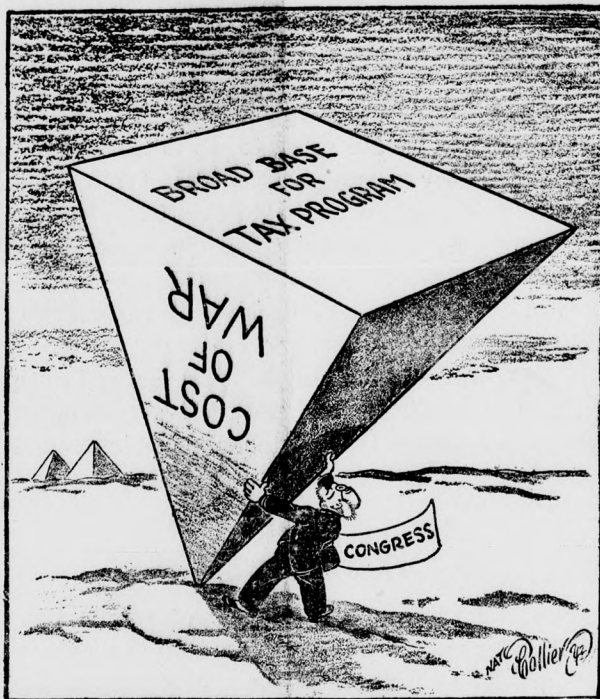

Mrs. Lucinda Naylor had the misfortune to fall on the steps of her home on Alice avenue and fracture an arm.

President has, I believe, come to something of the same conclusion himself, for which the people and those in high and important government posts should be duly thankful.

So far we have suffered no Hong Kong or Singapore. The loss of the Philippines, Wake, and Guam were losses to which the nations leaders were consciously or unconsciously reconciled even before the outbreak of war. In the case of Britain, however, the loss of its two important far-eastern outposts was due, to a considerable extent, to the complacency of those in command, and the firmly imbedded idea that attack could only come from the sea (for which they were adequately prepared), particularly in the case of Singapore—an opinion undoubtedly shared by the home war office.

All the foregoing suggests that two heads are better than one, and that in times of national crisis no man should try to carry the entire burden on his own shoulders. It is in times of crisis that good men pop up in all departments, and their brains, loyalty, and ability to make adequate and even brilliant decisions should be utilized to the nth degree.

BALANCING IT THE HARD WAY

Restrict Speed In Dim-Out

Because of greatly reduced visibility when driving with dimmed headlights, permissible speeds in these zones are considerably less than those previously permitted, reports the legal department of the National Automobile club. A recent study by police officials in the Los Angeles area shows that under the most favorable conditions, speeds in excess of 25 miles per hour are manifestly unsafe. It is conceivable that under less favorable circumstances a speed of ten or 15 miles per hour would be excessive and unlawful.

Motorists driving under dim-out regulations are, according to the N.A.C., subject to the provisions of the basic speed law which prohibits any speed greater than is reasonable or prudent under existing conditions, such as traffic congestion, highway or street surface, and lighting.

Rev. Baldwin To Stay Here

The Rev. Donald Baldwin was returned to the Campbell Methodist church when announcement of the appointments was made at the annual conference of the Methodist churches which had been held in Stockton.

In the one year during which Rev. and Mrs. Baldwin have been in Campbell they have made many friends who are pleased that they will remain here.

Vaughns Appeal To Higher Court

Walker E. and Ethel C. Vaughn filed an appeal in superior court from a decision of Justice Blaine's court which awarded J. M. Dahl a $250 commission in connection with a real estate deal.

The suit was instituted by Dahl against the Vaughns on the ground that he was entitled to the commission for having secured a buyer for their property. The Vaughns claim, however, that Dahl had told them that the prospective purchasers were not willing to complete the purchase on the terms agreed upon, and that they were at liberty to negotiate on their own behalf.

Attorney Martin Walsh represented Dahl and Elmer Jensen was counsel for the defendants.

Williamson-Lockard Wedding Here Sunday

Plighting her troth at a quiet wedding, lovely in its simplicity, Miss Ruby Ann Williamson became the bride of Bedford Bray Lockard at 5 o'clock Sunday, June 21, in the community room of the library.

The Rev. J. H. Bennett officiated in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

The hall was attractively decorated with garden flowers and the fireplace was banked with them, all in shades of blue and lavender, with magnolias on the mantel, forming the background before which the ceremony was performed.

The bride had chosen a poudre blue silk jersey suit for her costume, with hat and shoes of deeper blue, and carried a French bouquet of gardenias bordered with pastel colors.

Miss Marlyn Lee Williamson served as her sister's maid of honor and she wore a navy blue suit with light hat and shoes. Her flowers were pink roses with corn flowers.

The best man was Ennis Hughes of Bakersfield, a brother-in-law of the groom, and Erlin Williamson, the bride's brother who was home on furlough from the army at San Fernando, acted as usher.

Wedding music was played by True Lourtillott of Mountain View, and Dennis Bennett sang "At Dawning" with his wife as accompanist.

A reception followed the ceremony, and a unique feature of the refreshments was the bride's cake, made in three tiers, with an opening in the top tier in which a container held fresh flowers, and dainty nosegays surrounded the base of the cake.

The bridal couple left for a honeymoon somewhere in the high Sierra after which they were to be at home in Modesto where the groom is a distributor for ice cream and frozen foods.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayland W. Williamson of North Second street. She graduated from Campbell high school and San Jose State college, and has been a successful teacher, her last position having been in Sunnyvale.

Other relatives present at the wedding were the bride's parents, another brother, Stuart Williamson, and the groom's sister, Mrs. Ennis Hughes.

Reception Held For Newlyweds

The wedding of Kaleb Borg and Irene Hagen was celebrated Sunday with a reception held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Camille Hagen on East Campbell avenue. Immediate members of the family and close friends were present. The young couple was married in Reno on June 10.

MILITIA UNIT TO BE FORMED IN CAMPBELL

Los Gatos, Gilroy, San Jose, and many other centers of the county and bay region are organizing platoons of the state militia for home guard duty. The complete state enrollment to date is 12000 men. John B. Schneider, recruiting officer for the district, has proposed the formation of a similar unit here.

The catastrophe of enemy invasion may never come, but if there is any lesson that the present war has taught it is the necessity of being prepared for anything, everywhere, and all the time. Paratroops can float down from the sky anywhere, and Campbell is less than 30 miles from the coast. Jap snipers had infiltrated the island of Hong Kong in overwhelming numbers before the English knew they were in immediate danger.

All men between the ages of 16 and 65 are eligible. Enlistment is wholly voluntary and flexible, and although the set-up is under the California code, resignation at any time is permissible. Hours of training and drill will be determined by the local group, and service is restricted to the confines of the county and to actual enemy invasion.

At a preliminary meeting of the present squad of signers it was decided to issue a call to arms Wednesday, July 1, 1942, at 8 p. m. Those interested in the formation of a local unit of the state militia are requested to assemble at 33 North Central avenue, Campbell, at that time.

THE DOCTOR IN WARTIME

A short time ago, an American Medical association official observed that doctor calls might have to be "rationed" for the duration. The reason behind this is the immense number of doctors being called for service in the military forces. According to army heads, thousands more will be needed in the future.

American medicine is rising to this emergency with its typical spirit. Retired doctors are coming back into harness, and taking over the practices of younger men who have joined the army and navy. Other doctors are working harder, and serving an increased number of patients. And during this difficult period, the patient himself can help keep medical practices at the high standards to which we are accustomed.

Don't waste your doctor's time. Don't ask him to make a house call when you are perfectly capable of going to his office. Don't make his visits a social occasion, and expect him to sit around and visit for an hour after he gets through treating you. If, through your thoughtlessness, the doctor is forced to dissipate time, someone who urgently needs his attention may have to go without.

American medicine can serve both the armed forces and the civilian population with efficiency if patients will cooperate.

"THE PEASANT GROWS IMPATIENT"

Acknowledging his failure to reconcile the French people to abject subservience, Petain said in his latest radio address: "The enforced passivity of the suffering workman cannot be taken for resignation; the peasant grows impatient."

The French peasants grew impatient with less brutal treatment from a stupid king and insensate aristocracy in 1793. They tore Europe apart and smashed the semi-slavery of feudalism so utterly that it never reared its head successfully in western Europe again—until 1940. The German-hating French peasant bides his time once more. In his impatience grows a terrible rage for lust and vengeance. Hitler may have heard Petain's admission—and have shuddered.

ONE-EYED CONNOLLY JOINS UP!

One-Eyed Connolly has gone to work in a war factory to help win this war. Connolly takes a job! Connolly, who never worked, who disdained money, who never paid for anything. Connolly—the guy who crashed the Dempsey-Firpo fight by dressing as an ice man and marching through the gate with a block of ice, who crashed the Dempsey-Carpentier gate by rushing in, clad in a Western Union uniform, and yelling "Telegram for Mr. Dempsey! Telegram for Mr. Dempsey!"

That means this is total war—war to the last ounce of national energy and will. And so will antiquarians of 5000 years hence interpret the history of One-Eyed Connolly. Unravelling today's events from yellowed relics, some savant will read of Connolly's job and yell to his high-domed colleagues:

"What a war that was, gentlemen—terrific, titanic, to the death! Even One-Eyed Connolly went to work!"

LAST ROUND-UP

Only a few days to go, Mr. and Mrs. America, in rounding up scrap rubber. It's not too late to canvass attic, garage, basement and closets for this precious material. Anything from bath mats to rubber shoes, from old garden hose to drain plugs, collected and delivered to your nearest gas filling station, will fill the bill.

From the army's midget scout car, using 339 pounds of rubber, to the navy's giant dreadnaughts, requiring 75 tons of it, our fighting forces must have first call on our lean supplies of this strategic war necessity.

As President Roosevelt has said, "One thing you can be sure of—we are going to see to it that there is enough rubber to build the planes to bomb Tokyo and Berlin—enough rubber to build the tanks to crush the enemy wherever we may find him—enough rubber to win this war."

Whether gasoline rationing becomes necessary to slacken the pace at which we're burning up rubber on the highways is a question you're going to help decide. The deadline on the rubber salvage campaign is fast approaching. It's time to make that last round-up for Uncle Sam.

THIS IS NEWS!

News, according to newspaper greats from Dana and Pulitzer on, consists of the unusual in events.

It isn't news when a dog bites a man, because dogs frequently bite men. It is news when a man bites a dog, because men bite dogs most infrequently, if ever.

News must have been made in a San Jose divorce court last week, when a judge found a husband guilty of cruelty to his wife on her testimony that he had hit her over the head with the family dog, a spaniel. It was so unusual that the court couldn't find a precedent to rule by. The judge's decision probably set a brand new precedent in American law. The woman asked only that her husband be adjudged guilty of cruelty to her. The court, seeing things as a whole, ruled that the man was also guilty of cruelty to the dog.

The fact is plain, therefore, that it is cruel to hit a woman with a dog. The inference is plain that a man who really loves his dog will not be so cruel as to hit a woman over the head with it, irrespective of his attitude toward the woman.

What we're getting at is that, an an humble disciple of the great pioneer editors, we have established in this office a rule that it is definitely news when a man hits a woman over the head with a spaniel dog.

HARVEST HANDS WANTED!

The tragedy of waste in the midst of plenty is today being written in California's sunlit valleys. One of the worst labor shortages in the state's history is casting its blight on the orchards, fields and vineyards of the greatest agricultural commonwealth in the Union. One county reports 30 per cent of its field crops will rot in the fields unless immediate help is secured; in another county, "plowing under" of field crops has begun; from another comes word of an impending 50 per cent loss in crops.

To California, a shortage of field workers is of a more critical nature than elsewhere. Sixty-five per cent of its total farm income comes from field and orchard crops, requiring a high proportion of harvest hands, but only 35 per cent from animal husbandry. In other states, less than half the farm income is derived from crops. Having come through the valley of the depression with all colors flying—California's $878 million farm income last year was the greatest of any state's in the nation's history—it would be calamitous if agriculture were once again forced to retreat. In the past three years it has marched forward, with farm indebtedness being paid off and mortgages lifted. Even the long ailing wine industry, once disorganized and in a chaotic condition, has gained a firm footing with the generous help and counsel of banking institutions. Their assistance to processors in time of grave need, have meant state-

Camera fans, heretofore uncertain because of conflicting rumors that taking of photographs throughout California has been prohibited, need have no fears, reports the outing department of the National Automobile club, for the lakes, mountains, valleys, and so on, are still available for the camera.

Restrictions have been put on photographing army units, headquarters, transports, installations, camps, buildings, projects, weapons, equipment, supplies, movements or other military material or activities. Also on the list are such non-military structures and installations as bridges, tunnels, ships, and factories. No complete list could be prepared, but by each asking himself if any resultant picture would have any military value, he may impose a self-censorship in line with the military authorities' desires.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Wilson of San Jose are parents of a son, Timothy Jack, born June 13. Timothy is welcomed by a brother Michael. Mrs. Wilson is the former Phyllis Ford who taught here in the grammar school.

Among the applicants for a marriage license this week were James Gardner, 67 North Harrison avenue and Eileen Lucille Miller, also of Campbell.

Mrs. Elwood Baugh and two children, Eva May and Gordon, arrived Thursday evening from Oregon and are visiting Mrs. Hattie Baugh, North Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Becker have gone to Fresno for two weeks where as personnel representative for Schuckl & Co. he will secure help for their cannery at Sunnyvale.

City Dwellers Urged to Help In Harvesting

By unanimous resolution, the board of supervisors of San Francisco county called on all able San Franciscans not otherwise engaged in war work to sign up for service in orchards and fields during the harvest season. The board also urged the 13,000 municipal employees to spend their vacations in harvest toil.

Registration offices have been opened throughout the city and citizens were urged by newspapers, radio, billboards, posters, signs, cards, and flying squadrons of speakers to sign up to work in orchards and fields.

Several city groups already are at work in the fields, notably at Sebastopol, Loomis, and Ukiah. July 1, a large exodus of city workers into the fields is expected.

A daughter, Barbara Ann, was born June 16 at San Jose hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Bargas of Palo Alto. Little Miss Barbara Ann is the granddaughter of Mrs. Addie M. Bargas and great-granddaughter of Mrs. Addie Spagnoli, both residents of Alice avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coad left Saturday on a weeks vacation, planning to spend most of the time at Antioch and Pittsburg with their son's and daughter's families.

Mrs. Earl Mattison, nee Jeanne Gartner, was in Campbell Friday visiting relatives and friends. The Mattisons recently moved to San Jose from Carmel and are making their home near O'Connor sanitarium.

wide benefits. In no less than 52 of California's 58 counties, growers market wine grapes commercially.

This is but one chapter in the recent progress record of California agriculture. In productivity per acre, in the enormous variety of crops, in per capita farm income, this state is the nation's standard-bearer. Thousands of farm labor volunteers are desperately needed—today—to keep that standard flying! If you can volunteer, do so at once!

THE BOOK MARK

"Men Without Country" by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall.

Do you remember reading, some few years back, a book entitled Devil's Island? Fumbling around in my memory, I found several impressions still living, which I gathered while I was reading Devil's Island. Mr. Nordhoff and Mr. Hall did not write it. I am only mentioning it because in their recent novel they employ, in a sense, characters similar to those I met in Devil's Island, a story of France's Penal colony, located in French Guiana.

Men Without Country is a small book, comparable in length to Steinbeck's latest, The Moon Is Down.

The authors take the reader first to London, in the year 1939, when Great Britain was experiencing her merciless bombing. Near London was located an air field, operated by General de Gaulle's men who were fighting for "free France." And at this air field the reader is made acquainted with the leading characters of the book, Matrac, Marius, Le Petit, Maillot and Garou. These five men had been deprived of their freedom by their native country, France, but they risked their lives to escape from their enforced slavery to return to the country that had taken away their rights to help fight for the freedom that had been denied them.

As the story unfolds, France's penal colony at French Guiana is brought into the open and its horrors to its inmates are pictured vividly. Somehow, when I read about the cruelty and inhumanity imposed on the men there in stories written several years ago, I felt that all of those awful things were tales of ages past and that such things could not be in our life time, but Mr. Nordhoff and Mr. Hall have made things clear that Devil's Island is in operation today and that humans are kept there as of old. Occasionally a few escape, as they did in Men Without Country. They escaped to go back and give their lives for the country that had taken their freedom away from them. The description of how they were rescued at sea and their arrival in England make a thrilling tale. The book is a simple story, but it emphasizes the never-dying element of freedom as embodied in the souls of those five prisoners, to whom liberty has never been a thing of reality.

WAR GASES

By DR. WARD L. MOULD
Medical Gas Officer
U. S. Office of Civilian Defense

(This is the second of a series of six articles about war gases, their characteristics, and the measures the civilian can take to protect himself against gas injury.)

II—THE TYPES OF GASES

Some of the war gases are liquids at ordinary temperatures. As evaporation takes place, the vapors given off may cause injury to those in the neighborhood. Some of the gases may "contaminate" the area for several days or even weeks, depending upon the weather. They will evaporate more rapidly if the weather is hot. Such gases are known as "persistent" gases.

Other war gases are released as vapors or evaporate almost at once. They are quickly acted upon by currents and eddies of air which rapidly break up the gas cloud. Such gases are said to be "non-persistent."

Each group is composed of several members but all war gases have one characteristic in common. So that they will remain close to the ground, they are all heavier than air. In addition, all known war gases act either on the skin or the lungs, or both.

There have been widespread rumors of new all-powerful gases, against which there would be no protection, or against which our present gas masks would be ineffective. Such reports are without basis in fact. There are many gases commonly used in industry which are more injurious than any of the known war gases but none are suitable for use as war gases in the open. The gas mask developed for the U. S. Army is a versatile piece of equipment; it is doubtful if any war gas will be developed against which it will prove ineffective.

The soldier in the field cannot leave his post or seek shelter if gas is used against him. To do so would permit the enemy to advance through his lines. The civilian, on the other hand, if gas is used, can take shelter in such a way as to eliminate most of the danger. Even after contact with gas the exposed person can do a few simple things for himself which will in most instances prevent serious injury if carried out promptly. These procedures will be discussed in a later article in this series.

Dr. Bernard Robson, who has been recuperating at Capitola from a recent operation, gave a beach party last Saturday. His family, the Dr. Windsor Cuttings of Menlo Park, the T. A. Cuttings of Campbell, and the Weavers of 1st celebrated his complete recovery. Baseball, fossils and a picnic lunch were the chief attractions. Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. George Robson, Philip, and grandson Walter joined the party for a cool and delightful swim.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH HAYLOR

Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

It has been said that money is the thing everybody wants, but that nobody understands. That being the case, it is not surprising that most men fail to understand inflation—for inflation comes of the public having too much money to spend in relation to the amount of goods available that money can buy.

Mr. Average Citizen can't be condemned too severely if he fails to comprehend that having more dollars that he can readily spend is dangerous both to himself and his country, but California farmers, having suffered untold millions in losses as a result of inflation during World War I, know something of what it costs, even though they may not have a clear understanding of its processes.

Of vital importance, then to all farmers, and to the public generally, is Price Administrator Leon Henderson's testimony before the House Ways and Means committee that if current levels of earnings are maintained, the total national income this year will approximate $117,000,000,000 or twenty-five billion more than in 1941. And Mr. Henderson testified further that, due to the enormous war production demands, the supply of consumer goods (commodities available to the public) will be 26 per cent less than last year. That, of course, spells INFLATION in capital letters, unless effective controls are found to keep it in bounds.

Comments Dr. H. R. Wellman, outstanding agriculture economist and new directing head of the Giannini Foundation of the College of Agriculture: "If runaway inflation comes again, it cannot be too strongly recommended that farmers resist the fatal urge to buy additional land on borrowed money. Inflation is the time to get out of debt, not further into it!"

Reminding farmers of what happened during the last World War, Dr. Wellman reports: "During the inflation of World War I, prices of farm products as a group rose more rapidly than costs, and farmers generally were prosperous. For the time being, agriculture gained from inflation. It was an exhilarating experience while it lasted. But it didn't last very long; the aftermath did. Furthermore, even during the period of inflation, prices of all farm products did not rise equally. In fact, prices of some of them did not rise at all."

In the latter phase of the inflationary period of World War I, many farmers through out the United States went heavily into debt for land and equipment purchased at war-time levels. When prices tumbled in 1920-21, they found themselves with a greatly increased debt burden and a drastically reduced income. They learned by bitter experience a very simple but nevertheless basic fact; namely, that it takes an enormous quantity of low-priced products to pay off debts contracted at high prices."

The only way that farmers can gain even temporarily from inflation, warns Dr. Wellman, is for prices of agricultural products to rise faster than costs of production and costs of living. Similarly, the only way laborers can gain is for their wages to rise faster than costs of living, and the only way business men can gain is for their selling prices to rise faster than their costs. But he points out, quite logically, that "one man's prices are another man's costs!"

During the past two years there has been a large increase in the money incomes of consumers, but until recently this had been accompanied by a large increase in production of consumption goods, and hence prices did not rise appreciably. Now, however, production of consumption goods is being drastically curtailed, but the money incomes of consumers are being further increased.

More and more people are being put to work on the production of war materials. Their work does not increase the flow of consumer goods to market, but their incomes add to the market demand for such goods. This, Dr. Wellman correctly asserts, is the type of situation that is conducive to runaway prices.

It is the job of government officials and the country's leading economists to determine ways and means of coping with the inflation problem. But it is the lay citizen's job to do everything the government asks him to do in fighting this home front war against economic chaos. And Farmers, particularly, will do well to remember Dr. Wellman's sound admonition: "Inflation is the time to get out of debt, not further into it."
